When The Old Pattern Shows Up

Understanding why familiar thoughts, feelings, and reactions return — and how to begin creating a different response.

THE I LOVE METHOD™

PAGE ONE

You wanted something different.

Maybe you wanted to feel more confident.

More peaceful.

More connected.

Maybe you wanted to stop repeating the same reactions and finally move forward.

You felt ready for change.

And then...

The same thought appeared again.

The same feeling returned.

The same pattern showed up.

And a part of you wondered:

"Why am I still here?"

"Why does this keep happening?"

"Maybe I'm not changing after all."

But what if this moment is not a sign that you failed?

What if it is actually a moment of awareness?

A moment where something inside you is ready to be understood differently.

Why Old Patterns Return

Most patterns do not appear because something is wrong with you.
They appear because, at some point, they helped you navigate your life.

A way of thinking.

A way of reacting.

A way of protecting yourself.

Over time, these responses can become familiar.

And what feels familiar often feels safe — even when you are ready for something new.

This is why change can feel confusing.

A part of you may want to move forward,
while another part is still holding onto what it knows.

The answer is not to fight yourself.

The answer is to understand yourself.

PAGE THREE

Resistance Is Not The Enemy

When you try to create change, resistance often appears.

You may feel doubt.

You may question yourself.

You may feel pulled back toward what feels comfortable.

Many people see this as a problem.

But resistance is often a signal.

It is a part of you asking:

"Am I safe here?"

"Can I trust this change?"

"Will I be okay?"

Instead of asking: "Why can't I just change?"

Try asking: "What is this part of me trying to protect?"

A different question creates a different relationship with yourself.

The Moment Change Begins

Real change does not begin when you finally become a different person.

It begins when you become aware.

The moment you notice:

"I am having this thought."

"I am feeling this emotion."

"I am experiencing this pattern."

Something important happens.

You create space.

A small moment between what you feel and how you respond.

And inside that space is choice.

A new response. A new possibility.

A Simple Practice

The next time an old pattern appears, try this:

- 1 Pause. Take a moment to notice what is happening inside you.
- 2 Ask yourself: What am I feeling right now?
- 3 What might this part of me need?
- 4 What would it look like to respond with more understanding?

You do not need to fix everything in that moment.

You do not need to force yourself to feel different.

Start by meeting yourself differently.

That is where change begins.

A Different Relationship With Yourself

Many people spend years trying to change
by being harder on themselves.

More discipline.

More pressure.

More criticism.

But lasting change does not grow from fighting yourself.
It grows from understanding yourself.

When you create more safety within yourself:

You can see more clearly.

You can choose more consciously.

You can move forward with more trust.

The goal is not to become someone else.

The goal is to create the space for more of who you truly are to emerge.

Your First Step Forward

The old pattern appearing does not mean you are starting over.
It may mean you are becoming aware of something you are ready to understand.

Every moment of awareness is a step.

Every moment of self-compassion creates a new possibility.

Every time you choose to meet yourself differently, you are building a new relationship with yourself.
